SUICIDE AND THE BEST MOMENT OF

THIS GLORIOUS LIFE. An immense congregation of men yesterday heard the Rev. Dr. Phillips Brooks speak in Trinity Church of "The Christian Life the Fulfilment of Human Life." Dr. Brooks is not one of those Christians who are always singing "Earth's but a desert drear, Heaven is my home." He is a champion of humanity, and the most sterling passages of his lecture were those in which he proclaimed the gloriousness of human life and denounced suicide.

Said he: "I love this dear humanity in which we

Said he: "I love this dear humanity in which we live, with all its faults and failures, with all its sins and sorrows. No religion shall ever lay hold on the human soul which says 'You shall become something else than man; you shall become an angelie being, different from manhood.' Before Jesus lays His hands on the great burden of human sin He pours down His light and shows man what man is. It was because of the infinite value that He saw in human down His light and shows man what man is. It was because of the infinite value that He saw in human life that Jesus died on the cross. In His incarnation and crucifixion there is this splendid testimony to the gloriousness of human life. When, in the face of all that we hear of the talk current among men to-day, cheap talk, cheap talk in books and papers, or when we hear cheap talk fall from young men's lips about this pot worth living, the talk of the insignificant. 'Life not worth living,' the talk of the insignificant and contemptible little cynic, who grows more and more abundant in our artificial and fantastic civilization, it is almost impossible to let our pity overcome

"What does that young fellow know about human life! How does he know what it is for a man to deal with the deep, eternal issues? In that calm face of Jesus we see no cynicism, no contempt. In that calm face there is commiseration and there is love of man. It was the very being alive that was the thing that seemed so glerious to Jesus. Jesus accepted the privileges and the duty of life both together. There was no possibility in Jesus of the cowardice that makes a man "What does that young fellow know about human in Jesus of the cowardice that makes a main run away from life when life grows distressing. The cowardice of suicide, the infinite cowardice of suicide that in clear possession of his senses he took his own life; so we cover if in the veil of 'disturbed limagina lion.' Young men, put out of your souls the taint of cynicism, and despise the society and tone of hie that make cynicism and possimism and the contempt of life seem for the moment a giorious thins. that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his senses he took his own that in clear possession of his own that it is one in the contempt of the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of his own that it is one in the contempt of hi life that some men are living; yet they so easily accept the lower conditions into which they fall. There are two days in your remembrance, one when you lay in the gutter, the other when you stood upon the in the gutter, the other when you stood upon the mountain top. One day you were almost a beast, and hate to think of it. One day you thought yourself almost angelic, when you lifted up yourself vourself almost angelic, when you lifted up your soull with an exaltation that took you absolutely by surprise. These two days live in your remembrance; one down in the depths of the mire, the other in the glory of the sans. Tell me which is the day you most dread, which is the day you would most love to core to morrow? Do not you stand in terror when you think of the day of your wallowing and decradation?

"There are a host of things, such as buying and selling, you think you can do these things without Jesus Christ. If you think you can do these things without Him, try something else. Try to go outside of covetoness. Try to help the poor. Try to solve the problem of your brother's life. Try to make your son a better man than you are, than you ever dreamed of being. Then your weakness shows itself. Then you dron your hands in impotence and bend your kness in prayer. Ah, the first prayer, the first real sense of need, the first prayer, the first prayer is time we have found our incapacity! It is the glorious moment of a mortal's life."
